NEWS AND VIEWS FROM STATE PAPERS.

No Fear of a Rival.

The people of Tampa are watching those railroad operations south of the city with considerable interest—but no intelligent person has any idea that a rival city could be built in this vicinity. To attempt it would be a foolish waste of money.—Tampa Times.

A Remarkable Cat.

Mrs. Fannie R. Gary's cat has developed a strange inclination in going out and hunting rattlesnakes. Tuesday morning the cat brought into the kitchen a rattler fully five feet long which she found in the woods, caught behind the head and crushed the life out of it, and spread it before her kittens that they might regale themselves on a delectable feast. This is the first instance that Mr. Tom R. Gary has ever heard of such a procedure on the part of a cat. The cat's unexpected visit into the kitchen produced consternation with the cook, that only the strong arm of man could quell.—Ocala Star.

Usually the Case.

William F. Williams is again convicted of murder, with a recommendation to mercy. This is the second conviction of the young man of the same nature. He was first convicted in Pensacola of killing a merchant, John White, and secondly for killing a clerk in White's store named Edwin C. Dancy, at the same time. As usually is the case, Williams will go to prison for a few years, and then be pardoned.—Jacksonville Metropolis.

One Acre in Florida.

Editor Humphreys says one acre of Manatee county soil yielded $3,290 to its owner. Well, we have expected to hear that the Wizard of California had made a tree bear gold dollars, and we are glad to find Florida is ahead. Or is the Manatee wonder a member of the "luck family"?—Jacksonville Times-Union.

Must all Pay License.

After January 1st, 1936, there can be no more Peruna, along with several other like concoctions sold in this or any other of the dry counties of Florida. After that date any boozers who sell these disguised beverages must have a United States Revenue License, and that in Florida is prima facie evidence of violation of the law against selling liquor in dry counties. It is time to unite in singing the long-metre doxology.—De Funiak Breeze.

Now Up to Mr. Sheats.

Now that State Superintendent Holway has been vindicated by the courts it will be up to something else on Sheats to hunt up something else for political buncombe if he anticipates becoming a candidate two years hence.—West Palm Beach News.

Plenty of Game.

Hunting parties have been "to numerous to mention" ever since the game season opened in Lee County and, while deer don't seem to be as plentiful this season as heretofore, turkeys are thick, and all parties get as many as they can well take care of.—Fort Myers Press.

Not in Demand Now.

It is announced that the scientists have discovered a new kind of mosquito. But as they are not in demand at the present time the new variety may not be put on the market until next season.—Gainesville Sun.

Should Be Specific.

Gov. Broward in the course of his article in the Sun took occasion to remark that Florida is "afflicted with a sprinkling of editors who sell editorials for so much an inch, sentiment thrown in." This is a pretty serious charge for the governor to make against a class of useful citizens and let all suffer by implication the governor should be more specific and give names of any whom he may know to be addicted to so unprofessional and pernicious a habit.—Madison New Enterprise.

New Head for Steel Trust.

New York, Dec. 8.—It was stated here last night on good authority that Thomas Morrison, at present of New York City and formerly of Pittsburgh, and a director of the United States Steel Corporation has been chosen as the successor of William Ellis Corey, president of the steel corporation.

Mr. Morrison is a native of Dumfries, Scotland. He came to this country in 1886 and served as a machinist in Homestead, Pa., passing through all departments of the Carnegie Steel Company. He was born in 1861.

THE TRAGEDY AT THE U. S. NAVAL ACADEMY.

Galveston Tribune.

What the verdict will be in the Meriwether-Branch case no one can foretell, but it makes no difference what the results may be, there are some things that have come to the surface in the investigation which afford grounds for serious thought.

The tragedy at Annapolis will doubtless cause many to recall a similar affair at West Point a year or two since wherein a rather delicate cadet at that academy after being hazed and harassed for months by the upper class men was finally driven under the students' code, to fight in resentment of an open insult. The management of the student ring, who had apparently taken a dislike to the young cadet, compelled him to stand up to the best boxer and the biggest bully in the academy for several rounds, and the big fellow—fit representative of the system in vogue—several times knocked him to the ground by a brutal use of his superior strength backed by a superior knowledge of ring "science." Each time the young cadet was knocked down he was revived and sent back to receive further punishment, and when the brutal spectators were satisfied with the "sport" the young victim was on his way to the other world. The principals in the affair pretended sorrow, offered apology and made every demanded amendment, but the life could not be called back.

The case in Annapolis, while different from the once cited, has this one thing in common therewith: The so-called "code" among the students made the second tragedy possible as it did the first. In the evidence adduced it appears that Meriwether was the persecuted man, that the best he could do and the only thing according to student ethics, was to submit his cause to a trial by fist encounter, and while it has been shown technically that the death of his opponent was not directly caused by a blow from his fist, he will be a marked man to the day of his death because before he entered its doors, but if this is the Annapolis idea of the matter in which gentlemen settle their differences a change of faculty might be suggested.

Why this practice has been allowed to grow or exist might be a pertinent question for President Roosevelt to ask while he is looking into the case, and those who have been placed in charge of the young men whom the country is training to protect the home land should be held accountable for the misdirection of the energies of their charge. Annapolis is presumably a school where the student is taught to be a gentleman if he is not one when he enters its doors, but if this is the Annapolis idea of the matter in which gentlemen settle their differences a change of faculty might be suggested.

The New Styles in Crystal Gilt Glass are Here

Cut glass has a "hated rival" this season.

It is the gold-decorated intaglio-engraved glass made in Bohemia and the demand for it amounts to a craze in America.

Genuine gold leaf is used in "backing up" the engravings. In combination with the pure crystal the effect is incomparably brilliant.

We are showing a splendid line of the new fall styles with latest engravings and invite your inspection.

The prices are moderate.
